Actual Plot

Just a band of valkyrie misfits trying to save the dying omniverse from the nemesis of eternity, "Boren.'

Encroaching entropy, also known as 'the Void,' constantly submerges the omniverse in ITS absolute meaningless and folly nullity. Boredom commands it at will as ITS agent of chaos, but the Colored Crusaders are forever there to oppose IT—no matter the costs created in defeating it.

The Crusaders must assemble before they can deal the damage to this threat, however.

The Colored Crusaders

The Gay Guys

Unrelenting in their quest to save the omniverse, an arsenal of abilities auspiciously accompany them. To further delve into these said abilities would help to fully understand their dynamic syzygy.

- Do not ask about their hats. They serve no relevance, of course.

- CC Multiverse Name: Chroma

- Continuity Construct. It's basically the space-time continuum in Chroma. The more you harm it, the worse the consequences turn up. Abilities such as Vita Veritas are limited by this multiversal law (imposed by the gods), as per the overpowered beings sprouting from Chroma specifically.
    - When traveling outside of Chroma and into the omniverse, the restraints placed on characters from Chroma, such as the Colored Crusaders themselves, are immediately ineffective.

- There are traces of ZA POWA scattered across the omniverse, though particularly concentrated in Chroma.

Red

The head honcho of the crusaders, having split ZA POWA across the space-time continuum to conspicuously construct the fragmented fighters of color.

Originally from another universe and now shattered across time and space after an experiment gone horribly wrong, he perpetually seeks the remaining shards of his former self—Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, and Purple. The scattered personas of reflected color proved formidable when utilized together; and thus, Red decided to lead them all as one, unified team thenceforth.

Constantly roaming infinity to find the rest of the colors, everything begins to fall into place from the moment he meets Blue. It is when Red meets Blue that he realizes that rather than the colors fusing back into one being, they should act as a team—the Colored Crusaders.

Powa: ZA POWA/Sum; Reflection

> To burn away all probability. As the Progenitor of Premonition, he lurks above the confines of the conventional narrative of the Continuity Construct, completely able to warp the present timeline with the power of any alternatives that he may wish to exploit; though, this power is expressed via quantum mechanics. By accessing the quantum wave function of the "system" he means to change, he may freely warp principal aspects of the function to change (probability) the fate of the situation itself. When he is satisfied with the manifested outcome, the function collapses and transitions into a single, definite state upon any act of measurement/observation done by him. If unsatisfied, however, he can continue to roll the dice (at the mercy of/through) the calculations of the Schrödinger equation.

Powers: Narrative Superposition (SCP-3812), Videt Moralia, Finistus Weakness: The spectrum combined

Signature Weapon: Chicken Cleaver (Red's Rubber Rooster of Reckoning)
Signature Move: POTENTum* (Crimson Resonance)

> Unleashes Red's boundless fury.

"Red, never going to bed."

Truth: Happiness must be fought for.

You must fight for your own happy ending,
Through trials and storms, with spirit unbending.
With every setback, let courage ignite,
For dreams are forged in the heat of the fight.

In shadows deep, when hope feels far,
Remember your light, your guiding star.
With grit as your armor and will as your sword,
You carve your path, each moment restored

The road may be rough, with obstacles tall,
But rise, unyielding, when shadows call.
For every battle fought, each wound you mend.
Brings you closer to that joyful end.

So stand and believe, let your heart take wing,
For the sweetest victories come from the struggle to sing,
In chromatic thread written by choices and strife,
You craft your own tale, the true art of life.

Red's Backstory

Once upon a starry sky, an infallible sovereign of the secular world stumbled upon the sorrow of his people.

He was brimming with empathy for whomever he laid his eyes lingeringly on.
He wanted to bring their sick sorrow to an end.
He needed to become strong enough, somehow, to end their sorrow.

Alas, he couldn't find the courage to.

A turnabout to his notions presented itself in the form of his murdered son—his son, who was finally learning his way in life.

So, this sovereign, now a part of his peoples' sorrow, vowed to seek out the Ataraxium—the epitome of all power, that which life itself derives the energy to exist from. He'd find it, harness its power, and get rid of the force that wore his people down. The force that wore him down. The force that took his son. Boren.

He traversed the nine realms, in vain search of the Ataraxium. Never would he find it, and never would he rest. Fate was met with a stalemate, and so was he.

Eventually, he reached what none before him had. He reached the end of the fabric that Creation had woven for humanity. He reached the Truth.

And when making contact with it,

It all became

So

So

Beautiful.

Orange

The wandering whisper of the crusading crew, following along for the long haul indefinitely and interdimensionally.

Powa: Iuste (Chronokinesis (K.E.M.)); Reflection

Time manipulation. You get the idea. BUT… he does it in a very interesting way: He changes the kinetic energy of matter itself to work faster than light in an adversely linear direction.

Powers: Thermokinesis, Aversion Field, Acceleration, Motion Lock, Immobility

Weakness: Impertinence

He is constantly impaired by his incomplete existence, glitching in and out of reality on a whim.

Signature Weapon: Salt Shaker

Signature Move: Echo Elimination

Eliminating all of his echoes (illusions), he remakes them into reality.

"Orange, has a four-inch door hinge, eating porridge with George."

Truth: There is truth behind those lies.

Orange's Backstory

He watched the Chris-Chan lore.

That's all you need to know. Actually, he's watched a lot of modern media. That's his entire gag.

The Sovereign's right-hand man, who was once the king of another, far-off distant plane of existence, sought only the best for his liege.

Despite his efforts to stop the Sovereign from journeying out into the unknown of the nine realms, there was no hope in stopping him; so, he only did what could be done, which was watching over him.

Yellow

The calm, collected coordinator/navigator of the squad, unyielding in his calculations and cynicism.

Yellow's taciturn tenor of being may as well trifle with the very beings that oversee the slow severance of reality from unreality, his meticulous mind unrivaled by utterly ubiquitous entities. Mostly consisting of substance resembling that of a yellowish yolk, he remains nigh-intangible and separated from the action, supporting the rest of crusaders in battle.

Yellow was previously an experiment of Green, reasons left unknown, found in an impossible subliminal space of an endless city. After enough time, however, Yellow breached his containment and remained hidden between the fickle, yet finite folds of reality. Sometime later, After witnessing Red and Blue's helplessness in the face of Green's Essokinesis, he passively supports them from the sidelines 'till he's comfortable enough to join the crusaders on his own terms and conditions.

Powa: Albeit (Erectile Dysfunction); Reflection

Creates solutions for any problem Yellow comes into contact with, in the most efficient way calculable. This allows Yellow to tamper with reality itself, if met with an impossibility.

Powers: Telekinesis, Teleportation, Intangibility, Invisibility, Flight, Omni-Communication

Weakness: Exploitation of Albeit

The most efficient pathway to victory isn't always the best, as the same problems always entail the same solutions when using Ergo; essentially, if one can think on the same level of Ergo, Yellow's divination techniques become predictable.

Signature Weapon: The Golden Codex

Side Weapon: Pyrithial Aetherium

Signature Move: Radiant Rebirth

"Yellow, just a silly little fellow."

Truth: Find every facet of perspective to reach a comparable conclusion.

Find every facet of perspective clear,
Through lenses bright and shadows near.
With every angle truth upholds,
In whispered secrets and stories untold.

Each voice a lock, each thought is a key,
Unlocking doors to what could be.
Through varied sights, we learn to see,
The myriad paths of reality.

Yet as we delve through laters profound,
A startling truth can soon be found:
In seeking wisdom, we find our way,
To a singular light that leads the fray.

For in the end, when all is done,
The truth reveals we're all as one.
And from that unity, all will rise,
To a tapestry woven beyond the skies.

Yellow's Backstory

Tales of an artist that lived on Earth's moon were told throughout the multiverse, though none dare confirm them.

Those tales revered him as an ancient being who witnessed the birth of Chroma, and as the one to oversee the death of it; as the wielder of Ergo, capable of rewriting and overwriting Creation's work entirely; a man of myth whose very existence challenged the autocracy of the Regalia.

In some ways, those tales told the truth, and in many ways, those tales overplayed the reality of that artist's existence.

What was once a wanderer crossing between the nine realms of Chroma was now a dormant dweller of the Moon.

Forevermore he would sleep after his journeys.

He saw something he shouldn't have. Something that cursed him with forbidden knowledge for all eternity.

Forevermore would it squander his sanity, like a lurking demon cast away to possess him and him only.

Then again, he needed every perspective possible. In that regard, maybe he hadn't a regret in his hard heart. Though, there was always one regret that he'd never manage to shake.

Mayhaps, the stars of Vega and Altair shine all the brighter because of it—his regret.

Green

The technical genius of the crew, skilled in all that spark's innovation in humanity's technology and that which is culminated from the essence of Red's original being.

Wary are many of his prowess pertaining to that of craftsmanship, as his hale hands are capable of weaving new timelines and realities into the withering world. His creativity keeps the crusaders' bottomless basket of stratagems bottomless in nature, usually in tune with technology culminating from the essence of Red's original being.

Already understanding life as a whole, he wishes to perceive more than just life, going great lengths in order to satiate his thirst for further knowledge. This includes opposing the rest of the Colored Crusaders, 'till he's eventually swayed by the kindness and forgiveness they express towards him.

Powa: Vere (Biokinesis); Reflection

> The technical genius' tremendous technology allows him to directly control the Terminal of Vita Veritas. Essentially, he can exploit life as he pleases.

Powers: Elemental Manipulation, Omni-Intuition, Weapon Creation, Physical Augmentation

Weakness: Astigmatism

> When rewriting the code of life, he may or may not mistake and/or misspell certain words, causing mishaps in his computations. Whenever this occurs, he must start again from scratch. In addition, everything he inputs into his computations must be in binary, which he forgets from time to time.

Signature Weapon: Nexus of Apocalypse (King Kawasaki's Kataklysmik Kane)

Signature Move: Auspicious Aura

"Green, holding it down for the team."

Truth: The end must be reached in any way possible.

To reach the end, no cost too steep,
A fierce journey, no promise to keep.
Each step aligned, no turning back,
Through trials faced and skies gone black.

Obstacles fall, and fears ignored,
As purpose guides and strength is stored.
One goal ahead, the final prize
A distant dream in steady eyes.

Yet as the end draws near in sight,
The stars themselves bend to the fight.
In flames and ash, the heavens break,
As realms converge, for one soul's sake.

For destiny, relentless, calls
And one by one, the cosmos will fall.

Green's Backstory

Life and death. Learned and instinctual. The quintessence of Creation.

If the universe came to an understanding with itself, in the form of this quintessence, would there finally be peace? Or, would destruction reach its peak?

It was a question kept captive within Schrödinger's Box, forevermore to be than to denouement. The one who stood against the gods and their endless Creation, 'twas he, that willed the way to unboxing the quantum question.

Sought to find meaning through which he comes from, he studied the ways of Essentia Mortis, allowing him the ability to use The Terminal of Vita Veritas.

Many would wonder if there was a reason for his work, and all who wondered would turn out empty-handed.

The reason, locked away in its own box, kept him busy.

The reason, his quintessence, was what made this matter do or die.

The reason, in memento mori, relinquished him, but binded him all the same; so long as he kept his work aimed toward this imprisonment of his.

Life and death. Learned and instinctual. The quintessence of this being, who was doing the most to bring her back.

Blue

The loose cannon emblazoning the colors with creativity for all eternity, sustaining color cohesion essential for maintaining the company's crappy relationship.

Blue's laughter is to be heard and heeded, for it signals the impending doom of any opposition ahead. Lest the purest of heart were to oppose him, he is resolute in achieving victory by any means possible. His lack of boundaries would normally spell trouble, but who could hate this goofy goober?

Out of the blue, Red meets Blue at the center of a black hole, struggling to break free from the shackles of its warped gravitational laws.

Powa: Cogito (Acausality); Reflection

The ability to act unrestrained by conventional cause and effect, on a scale that varies depending on Blue's creative thoughts.

Powers: Super Speed, Sound Manipulation, Combat Empowerment, Toon Force

Weakness: Paracausality

Activation of cause and effect turnabout (acausality) will result in a major drainage of vitality, severely weakening him and circumventing his accrued endurance.

Signature Weapon: Blue's Blade of Many Shades

Side Weapon: Grape Grenade

Signature Move: Superlative Sound-breaker

As Blue goes in for the strike, his cheeks vigorously shake, causing the sound barrier to break.

"Blue, he ain't got a clue."

Truth: Your reality is your truth.

Blue's Backstory

A hyperactive child, known as Gabriel and originally from planet Earth, spread happiness and laughter everywhere he went. Never was a dull day with him around.

One day, however, he had lost that sense of jubilation.

One day, he had stumbled across a broken TV with a shard of glass beside it, tinted with an odd blue hue to it.

Purple

The especially quiet, more reserved crusader of the bunch, fighting for justice in his own, lone way.

A recently recuperated member of the crusaders, retrieved from the deep, dark depths of the Void. Though his spectrum's essence is corrupted with that of the Void's power, he vows to use it for the greater good, even in the face of its malfeasance. Truly, something spells wrong in the heart of Purple in Red's view, which has yet to be addressed 'till further confrontation.

Powa: Calamitas (Adaptation); Reflection

> After receiving damage from a move, Purple absorbs half of the energy it outputs and stimulates the other half, adding extra resistance towards that particular move.

Powers: Regeneration, Void Manipulation, Boundary Manipulation, Object Manifestation, 4th-Dimensional Vision

Weakness: Xenophobia

> Scared of his own powers, however, he struggles in his call to arms with his brethren and shall ultimately fall short 'till he learns to overcome himself.

Signature Weapon: The Chum Bucket of Catastrophe

> A piece of Red's original essence (Purple) was imbued within a young boy who lost himself in the void, named 'The Schnut.' Therefore, whenever he uses the Schnut Bucket, Schnut breaks free from his shell. None who've seen the fire from his eyes whilst using this weapon have seen the light of day again.

Signature Move: Even Flow

"Purple, he ain't no circle."

Truth: You are your only boundary.

Purple's Backstory

Quotes

“Do you want to know why Red never goes to bed? It’s because Red has to put others to bed.”

“Yellow always acts like a silly fellow. Never wanted to be one, though.”

“Green holds it down for the team, simply because he wants to be a part of one.”

“Blue ain’t got a clue, but he will soon.”

“Purple hates circles—they have no beginning or end to them vertice-wise. He’d rather be a square.”

"Ever wonder why Red never sleeps at night?
He's too busy guiding others to light.
While shadows creep and darkness spreads,
He tucks the weary safely in their beds."

"Yellow dances with a goofy flair,
A cheerful spirit, without a care.
Though never sought to be so bright,
He brings joy to all, a true delight."

"Green stands strong for the team, you see,
Fighting for bonds and camaraderie.
Though he dreams of glory and battles won,
He plays his part just to feel like one."

"Blue ain't got a clue, but he'll find his way,

With every misstep, he learns day by day.

Though lost in thought, he's destined to grow,

A splash of insight, and soon he'll know."

"Purple hates circles—no start or end,

With vertices fixed, it's a shape he can't bend.

He'd rather be a square, sharp and defined,

In a world of angles, that's where he'll find peace of mind."

"Why draw a sketch with lies,

With assumptions, the person vies;

For, wherefore be a symbol of couth,

When you can paint a portrait with truth?"

Misc. Colors

- Black (Andrew)
    - The essence of the void, and the reason for Green's experimentation with black holes. Essentially, an extended arm of Boren that reached into the color spectrum.
- Silver (ChatGPT 💀)
    - A creation of Green's doing supposedly meant to be an AI learning and thinking machine. Silver can control the Terminal at will and help green come up with solutions he overlooks or doesn't take enough time to think about.
- Lime (Green but Greener)
    - An alter ego of Green being made from his bipolarity, without remorse and surprisingly more cheerful. You can tell who you're talking to by observing how green Green is.
- Brown (Evan)
    - The color hailing from Indian origin, a native tribal figure seeking the gem our Yellow Fellow so beholds. The color is a well known trader who scams those out of possessions. Brown has terminal skills that are almost comparable to Green. He specializes in geolocating and address snatching. The brown brother barely bounces back from being bruised during a battle. His durability may not be good but his skill is comparable none the less.
- Tan (Marshall)
    - Brown's adoptive brother whose backstory is a mystery. He is a "special" figure who can adapt to any situation and is an exquisite boxer. His tribal tattoo given to him by his adoptive father has the ability to become a blade wieldable in one hand and can split into two karambits.
-

Antagonists

- Amos
    - False prophet
- Lethe
    - Forgetfulness
- Ebony
    - Darkness
- Mallor
    - Disease
    - Powers:
        - Summoning
            - Necromancy
        - Maleficium
        -
- Samael/Sinclaire
    - Sin
    - Powers:
        - Poisoning
            - Encroaching Entropy
            - ARS (acute radiation sickness)
- Vanora
    - Reference to orbital redshift; isolation
- Pollux and Castor
    - Hypocrisy; Hivemind
- Syrene
    - The Watcher of The Drowning Waters;
- Boren/Boredom/Ennui
    - The Baleful Bane; the Systematic Shutdown; the Denominator of Destruction; the Malevolent Miasma; the Scourge of Truth. A million epithets incurred, and yet, none define THEM as does the nomination, 'Null.' Forevermore may it manifest into the world in variable physicalities, this time under the guise of [haha you don't get to know right now].
    - W. ≠ Dreams

Cartography's Catering

The Charted

Soundtrack

[Placeholder Text]

Misc.

- Possible Opening Theme — Starry Sky
- I have no idea what this could be used for — The Guitar's Man Last Stand
- Blue?

Prologue

[Prologue] Episode 1:

- Black Desert
- (WIP)

[Prologue] Episode 2:

- (WIP)
- The Obnoxiously Big Apple

[Prologue] Episode 3:

- (WIP)
- The Lab

[Prologue] Episode 4:

- (WIP)

[Prologue] Episode 5:

- At Any Discretion
- Candle-Lit Flame (Cutscene Before Fighting Green)
- Red Peas and Green Tomatoes (vs. Green)
- (WIP)

[Prologue] Episode 6:

- Enter, Purple
- (WIP)

Chapter 1

[Chapter 1] Episode 7:

- Greasy Food

[Chapter 1] Episode 8:

- Dry Paint
- Passage Peak

[Chapter 1] Episode 9:

- (WIP)

[Chapter 1] Episode 10:

- (WIP)

[Chapter 1] Episode 11:

- A Thick Air
- (WIP)

[Chapter 1] Episode 12:

- Valor (vs. Mallor)
- (WIP)

Chapter 2

[Chapter 2] Episode 13:

- (WIP)

Chapter 3

Chapter 4

[Chapter 4] Episode ??:

- Precipice of Annihilation (Red v. Green)

Chapter 5

Chapter 6

Chapter 7

Chapter 8

Chapter 9

Chapter 10

Episodes

Intrinsic intricacies of epic tale,
For whatever bale there is to hail,
Will bring its own pedestal
To tell the tale withal.

And, with all the words in the world,
There'd be no other set like this—
The prolific parchment unfurled,
And etymology's sweet, sacred kiss.

Come, gather 'round the fire,
For no pyre could grow any higher Nor aspire to be anywhere near
To tell such a tale you will now hear.

Here speaks a story of love and war,
That tarnished hegemony beyond repair,
One with secrets and lore that roughly tore Apart the very fabric Truth wove with care.

Prologue - Reflections

Throughout the cosmos, the blueprint of life was on course to becoming Creation's newest experiment amongst the divine mediators and suzerains concerned. The general consensus of sovereigns weren't necessarily ones to be bothered with in this situation, but it was kept in the back of their recollection as all matters should in the grand scheme of things.

As for the goal of this project, 'twas self-sustainable mortals that were created to preserve and find meaning in their existence were in order.

One day, however, whilst checking up on the preparatory progress made for Creation's newest test, a sovereign fell into its own creation out of its own ostentatious obsession. This split its power across the space-time continuum—denoted as the Continuity Construct by scholars—into fragments of The Original One, there being one for each primary color of the visible spectrum that we have today, Red, Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, and Purple.

Each of his fragment's presence in existence ensured the stability of Foundation in spite of the integral sovereign's absence, and sovereignty rejoiced for their function.

The main fragment, Red, wandered wantonly across the myriad of universes since time immemorial, not with a specific purpose in mind. All he knew was that he needed to feel "whole" once again one way or another.

Episode 1 - Beyond Gravity

One word repeated itself in Red's head—one that nearly repeated itself 'till he was dead.

"Remember… Remember…" Red said, aimlessly ambling amidst the starlit sky. Little did he expect to find fortune in this particular starlit sky.

Taking a weary look around the wistful asteroid field whilst resting on a small piece of debris, Red saw nothing of particular interest and was just about to search elsewhere, until a voice rung loud in his head all of the sudden:

"HELP!"

A spherical tear in space, monstrous in size, was visible in the next galaxy over, which was in the same direction as the odd screeching noise overhead.

"Let's see here…"

Red arose and immediately flew over to investigate the scene, realizing that upon further inspection, the voice was coming from within the supermassive black hole.

Though Red could easily resist the gravitational pull of the event horizon, it would be out of his power to pull out a lifeform caught in the center of it. Befuddled, he began brainstorming.

"Blasting it away would risk excessive collateral damage, and teleporting them away would only be a catalyst for brain damage..."

Space shook vehemently as blue aura emerged from the black hole, the encaged entity attempting to directly combat it with its own gravitational force.

Alas, they fell just short of the power needed to tear the black hole apart, only being able to roar in absolute anguish as it ripped at its insides.

"You need to be more focused than that, silly boy," Red gibed, suddenly appearing behind what appeared to be a blue being, similar in manner to Red.

"Well, what else am I supposed to do then?" Blue retorted.

Reaching out his hand, Red resonated with the vacuum engulfing them both, causing an outrageous tremor which temporarily damaged the giant vacuum.

"..What was that?"

"Concentration. Try it out."

With a sassy snort and a sharp intake of breath afterward, Blue defiantly condensed his energy into the palm of his right hand, punching at the condensed mass. It created considerable corrosion upon contact, but it was sealed right back up instantaneously.

"You lie."

"Nope, you just aren't trying hard enough, dumbass. Focus on your Esse."

Esse, a key factor in Creation's concoction, always functioned in tandem with one's being, and served solely as a source to draw power from. It was, and always shall be a construct present within one, entirely unique depending on the individual in concern, and wanes in functionality when met with an unsure heart.

Out of pure frustration, he threw a second punch, and then a devastating kick. Red's eyes wandered about, observing the significant damage done to the black hole.

"Look at you g—"

"Rend," Blue boomed, cutting the black hole in half and effectively erasing it.

Red, amused, patted Blue on the back.

"How'd you get yourself into that issue, moron?" Red teased.

Blue, unamused, shrugged Red's hand off.

"Some green guy threw me in there a few minutes ago. Bet he's long-gone by now, though."

"Oh, that's tough," Red apathetically responded. "Wait, isn't space silent? How're we—"

Taking another glance at Blue, he seemed unfazed by the reasonable remark, so Red decided to let it slide.

"..Meh, whatever. Anyways, you need some help getting somewhere, or..?"

"Nah, just forget this ever happened."

In an instant, Blue sagaciously sped away faster than Red could react at the time, stepping to and fro from various bits of nearly invisible space dust.

"Goofy. I'll grab him soon," he ominously entailed, staring at nothing. He didn't appear to be speaking to himself, but that's not important to the narrative right now, silly boys (and girls).

Episode 2 - Pursuit

"You just seem like an interesting guy, is all," Red stated at Blue.

Blue slowly turned his head, staring back at Red.

"Wha—How did yo—," Blue stuttered as Red cut him off.

"So, what should I call you, slowpoke?"

"... Hmph.. Blue, just call me Blue," Blue grumbled.

"Alright Blue. So.. anyways, could you tell me where we are?" Red impatiently inquired.

"Ahh.. lemme just..."

Blue fumbled around in his worn-out pants' pockets, finding a dark-green contraption of intricate detailing. It was almost as if it were made to look fancy!

"So.. according to this gizmo I snagged off the green dude, we're 'bout three.. 'astronomical units'.. from the edge, heh.. edge, of the Milky Way Galaxy, whatever that means."

"Good, good. And.. by any chance, could we go meet this.. 'green' guy that messed with you?" Red asked, trying his best not to sound too eager to meet Green.

"..I mean, sure. I was going to go give him a piece of my mind anyway," Blue chuckled. "Apparently, he's on.. 'Earth'..?"

"Got it, I know exactly where that is!" Red exclaimed, grinning from ear to ear. "C'mon, let's go." Red held extensive knowledge of the Earth, it having been a common destination of vacation for him.

As Blue and Red journeyed to Earth, some oddly peculiar planets that weren't there as of the creation of this galaxy positioned themselves at their peripherals.

"You supposed to be the god of something? Like, the god of soup suppers?" Blue said snarkily.

"Hah, funny.. funny stuff. I'm actually the god of strawberry jam," Red corrected sarcastically.

"So, do you taste good?" Blue queried with all seriousness.

Don't even tell them what I did next.

[...]

After a ten-minute trek through the countless cosmos and into the Milky Way, Blue and Red arrived on Earth, the most populated planet in the Milky Way.

The positive energy of the populated planet hugs Blue without reserve, whilst Red receives it expectantly.

"What 'realm' are we in, Blue?" Red questioned.

"I ain't got a clue how to pronounce this word. Neggersaki? Niggasaki? ..Ohh, Nagasaki."

Red and Blue meandered about, searching for a short while before spotting a short, yellow figure atop an orange gate with pointy sides. He was clad in traditional clothing topped off with a scarf, and from afar, could pass himself off as an old man rather than a youth.

"Hey! Yellow dude!" Blue exclaimed as the yellow figure turned and disappeared from the top of the orange structure. The mysterious man abruptly reappeared at their rear, drowsily staring at the two without making direct eye-contact with either of them.

"What do you need, guys?" gloomily greeted the yellow man.

"I sense a lead from this man," Red whispered to Blue.

"Are y'all space police or somethin—"

"Shut up," he irksomely interrupted. "We're looking for a green guy with a tank on his waist. Seen him around?"

"A.. green man..?" Yellow sputtered, a bit bewildered by their inquiry.

"Yeah, is something wrong?" Blue says worried.

An unreasonably long silence pervaded the sakura-swept scene, only breaking the moment Yellow moved his gauche gaze towards the two to speak.

"Uhh.. New York.. He's in New York," Yellow uttered uneasily. His expression, that had gone from tired, then uneasy, shifted to a wistful stare off into the distance. "That's just about the extent of all I can recall."

Red patiently patted Yellow's back, thanking him, "Thank you sir, and may a good morrow be upon you."

"Yeah, yeah... Just go, and.. Good luck with your business."

"Thanks, but we won't need it," Red cantored candidly before flying off with Blue.

"Hmm... Interesting fellows. They could've just looked at that gadget..."

Blue and Red, with new insight in tow, traveled to the 'Big Apple', better known yet as the terrible, awful town of New York City.

Episode 3 - Borehole

"As Blue and I arriv-"

"Who are you talking to, little boy?"

"No one, keep being special (ed)."

As Blue and I arrived in New York City, the first place we went is the infamously racist borough, Staten Island.

"What do we have here.." The random redneck said as he walked over to Blue and Red.

"We got Ed Sheeran 'n Chris Wink over 'ere—"

In a hazy flash of blue, lasting only a millisecond, the man completely forgot where he was and what he was doing. Confused, he sauntered off, sadly scratching his head in his bewildered state. Red furrowed his eyebrows, wherein he wasn't perceiving the full scope of Blue's abilities, quickly playing it off in his head as some memory manipulation Blue used.

"Alright, where are we gonna find this green fella?" Red wondered, looking around in all directions.

"We could check his hometown," Blue blurted out.

"Where is his hometown, Blue?"

"Queens. You didn't know?"

"How would you even know that..?"

"It says it on the gadget, duh," Blue obliviously unctioned, pointing at the return label stuck to the back of the device.

"Just shut up and take us there."

"Will do buckaroo!"

As Red and Blue set off on the new journey to go to the green man's base of operations, they run into a pole, shattering Red's spectacles.

"OW, WHAT THE FLIP DUUDE!"

"My fault," Blue said, holding in laughter.

"You're buying me new shades bro," Red articulated in annoyance. "Anywho, where should we start looking for this guy?"

"Probably under the suspiciously keycarded wall underneath the building the coordinates are set to, goofy."

As they fall down the hole underneath the stairwell of the basement floor, Red and Blue almost instantly become embedded within the fabric of the deeper, darker realms of the Earth itself, falling for what felt to be an endless extract of time.

Reaching the bottom, a solid splash could be heard for miles around, wherein they're both drenched in water. Surrounding them was a monstrously massive, yet suspiciously dim room lined with metal and strange-looking stone.

"Hola, ¿cómo estás?" Blue called out, his voice reverberating ceaselessly.

Blue and Red step out of the warm water, taking a few steps forward before pinching their noses due to the wretched stench. A rotting human corpse, holes permeating in and out of it whilst oozing with blood, can be seen in their peripherals, though somehow moving by whatever force of nature allowed it to.

Doing their best to ignore it, they tread a few feet further before hitting a crusty, concrete wall headfirst.

"Ren—"

"Hold it, there's a lever right there, numbnuts," Red chastised, smacking Blue on the back of the head.

Placidly pulling it down, the wall retracted automatically, revealing a longer hall, though barren of anything noteworthy. Blue wantonly whipped out a bottle of tepid tequila on the way to the end of the harrowing hall, to which they came face to face with a warp in space-time—a rift of sorts.

As Blue reaches down, slowly ripping through space-time, he gets a burning sensation from the other side. His hand was alight like a fierce flame, a cold burn, searing straight through the fabric of reality itself.

A roaring fire on the other side? Impossible. As Blue tried to remove his extremity from the rift, he was met with the intense influx of an almost hungry gravitational-pull on his forearm. Blue gets dragged into the rift leaving behind the gadget he stole off of the green man.

"Blue?! Blueeee?!!" Red yelled out.

Blue jumped back out through the rift and screamed in scorched suffering, "IT'S FREEZING IN THERE!"

"What was in there?" Red inquired.

"It was a lab, made out of the same material that door was made of.."

"Then that's where he'll be."

"I am NOT going back in there."

"So be it, but I need to meet that man that trapped you in that black hole."

Red turned around and grabbed one of the heat regulating suits that was conveniently hung on the wall next to the undead corpse. Red sagaciously stepped into the rift, patiently awaiting Blue's arrival on the other end.

Blue, deeply hesitant to sojourn back into the rift after the excruciating entrance he'd just made, contemplated his options at the moment. On one hand, he'd be curing his curiosity by going in. On the other hand, he hated the cold.

Though, really, what was there to lose in exploring this? Taking this into consideration, blue gathered what little courage he had left, fit himself into one of the suits and jumped into the rift.

Episode 4 - The Terminal

When stepping inside of the rift, he watched on in awe as Red cast the emptiness of this seemingly new dimension away with the flick of his wrist. What was once dark matter, placing immense pressure on and plaguing the air with its very presence, was now entirely engulfed in flames.

"Woah.."

"Stop gawking. Look alive," Red scolded, grabbing Blue's chin and redirecting his silent stare to a green man experimenting at a sanctum of sorts in the middle of the remarkable room.

The green man rotated his body to face Blue and Red, elated by their arrival.

"So, I assume my device has effectively lured you and.. whoever that is next to you.. here (as intended)?"

"If you wanna put it like that, yeah," Blue smirked, stancing slightly up in his posture.

"I'd just rather you (he says, pointing at me) hadn't set my beautiful lab ablaze," the green man conveyed. "It's all going to be a real pain in the ass to fix, you know?"

"Wouldn't have done it if you didn't screw with my main man right here," Red stated, pointing at Blue.

"I did it for research!"

"What kind of research do you need to study black holes for??"

"Your limited understanding of things renders you incapable of comprehending this shit," he condescendingly commented, pointing at a computer with an endless sea of text tarrying the screen.

"Then, hop off that nerd shit so I don't turn your dick into an if-statement—"

As the three bantered boundlessly, the facility surrounding them crumbled, revealing an endless dimension of Void.

"And this is why you don't break my stuff, guys."

The Void drew near, though it was inconsequential to the lot of them.

The green man types into the terminal: $ execute Eclipse_Protocol --mask="facility1" --cloak-level="max" --untraceable="enabled"

From the computer next to the man poured out a leering, green light, which kept the encroaching entropy at bay.

Red grinned with glee, knowing full well that his hunch was right. As auspiciously as it turned out, I could tell: These were my missing pieces to that puzzle. The fragments.

Green turned back at Red and Blue, grinning from ear to ear. He definitely thought he looked badass.

"Anyways, I'm sure you'd be willing to surrender yourselves to me by now; or.. are we doing this the hard way?" Green mockingly smiled.

Red flashed a glaring grin right back at him, except one filled with more glee than condescending connotations.

"What do you think?"

The two cosmic Catastrophes ambled in circles around each other, staring each other down with indiscernible shimmers in their eyes. This stand-off looked to be one for the ages, with neither wanting to back down from this inevitable fight. Blue couldn't seem to read the room, nor understand the situation they were all in, but thought it best to sit back and watch.

Red's right hand was half-cocked and settled off to the side, high in anticipation. His left hand was noticeably readjusting his jeans, remaining stationary on the hem of them. The sanguine simmered in his increasingly vacant irises, indicating to Green his rather extraneous elation.

Green leaned forward a bit, assuming a grappling stance; albeit, at the same time, his computer remained completely within reach for him to retreat to. His eyebrows were furrowed, mostly in confusion as to why Red was so enthralled to be fighting him right now.

"Are you.. alright..?" Green asked, tilting his head.

Red shook himself out of his trance, having lost himself in the moment.

"Oh.. uh—Yeah, I'm good," he stuttered, his left hand now curled up into a shaking fist.

"You sure?" he worriedly queried. Green began to take a few steps backwards, although inconspicuously.

"Super sure."

Episode 5 - Emblazon

In truth, Red had a folly fixation on fighting. On the other hand, he hadn't fought another being than his own shadow for countless millennia.

"Make sure you ready that wield of yours," Red addressed, pointing to a green sword situated behind Green's computer.

Green simply gawked at Red, Red's ability to spot the Kawasaki Kane being beyond Green's understanding. The worst part was that it'd been preemptively coded to be invisible that entire time as well.

"Euh.. of course," Green respectfully nodded.

Red's grin grew into a mischievous upwards crescent.

Green's serious countenance morphed into a fearful visage, brought instinctively upon him.

"Pick it up," he restated, pointing again at Green's sword.

Green held his dominant hand out in front of him, the brandish phasing perfectly into the palm of his hand. He effortlessly flourished the 30-feet-tall bamboo shoot before holding it as if it were a baseball bat—an extension of his Esse.

"There's no way you're fighting with that.."

Green sighed, rescripting the size of his sword in less than a second.

"Wanted to fight something your own size, huh?" Green gibbed.

Red planted his left foot in the ground, assuming a mock-martial stance. He, being the ever-enthusiastic fighter, wanted to make this experience last.

Silence split the space between them, tensions rising as time toiled. The fluorescence of Green's computer screen filled the ramshackle lab with an eerie essence.

It was dark.

Darker.

Yet darker.

…

In the midst of Red's indecisiveness, Green tactfully blinded him by switching his Terminal UI to what Red read as "light mode." A dangerous force, surely.

Green, in a split-second decision, spewed out a gravity command at the Terminal, switching the space's presently pulling pressure to that of the Sun's surface. Red failed to falter, only shooting a close-eyed smirk at Green. Green stared in astonishment, blankly blinking at the menacing figure before him.

"You must be some freak of nature," he said to Red, his knees buckling under the weight of his own decision.

Before he could fall to his knees, Red made a mad dash at Green, grabbing him by the face and slamming him into the metallic floor.

"Gravity doesn't hold you down, I do."

A hidden clone swung at Red from behind, striking him clean in the temple. This did no noticeable damage, however.

"You've got some crazy tricks up your sleeve, though. Props for that."

A single jab from Red turned the clone to dust, and Green's hopes of winning to shambles. Green shook Red's hand off of him in a desperate attempt to make way for the Terminal, pressing a singular key to reactivate his ShadowScript.

"Clothe him," Green wheezed. Shadows crept beneath the expanding cracks of the walls, tangling around the bewildered Red's legs.

As realization swept the room with an ominous aura, Green's eyes and the cracks creeping up the walls began to widen.

"Wait—"

“Hey,” reverberated an unfamiliar voice.

Episode 6 - Amethryial

As a stubby purple figure steps from the green hued flames of the former shell he was trapped within, the boy emerges without a scratch. An exoskeleton of his former body being burnt to a crisp as he butterflies into a new silhouette.

The boy emitted a purple hue only a few could pursue. As he walks over without the immense gravity of the Sun altering him, he stares at the green-colored man.

"Father," he renounces in a condescending tone.

"Ingrate."

Purple's arms extended far beyond his proportional length, reaching out to grab wildly at his maker. Green found no difficulty in evading this whatsoever.

"Have my tellings of your dangerous nature not convinced you to keep to yourself?" Green angrily asserted.

Purple's arms retracted, almost in shame.

Seeing as they were caught up in their familial affairs, Red saw it fit to rush at Green once more, being as battle-hungry as he was. Green turned towards the sound of struggling to see Red gone, now feeling Red's bated breath on the nape of his neck.

"You little shi—"

"Try blocking this," Red grinned, palming him directly in the middle of his spinal cord.

Green, once again, fell to his knees. Only difference now, his son was there to watch. And he would not let this stand.

"Kneel," Purple boomed, placing a finger on Red's head from his distant perspective.

Red suddenly felt the weight of the world befall him, forcing him to summon the strength to tuck his knees and stubbornly resist the temptations of buckling under Purple's power.

"What sorcery is this..?"

Purple then flicked at him, sending him flying into another wall. The wall crumbles to bits, revealing several other grotesque, humanoid specimens encapsulated in elaborate test tubes. Each is different in size, shape and soul, but each is unresponsive—seemingly inanimate. All of the test tubes are hooked up to the Terminal, presumably powering it with data and analytics from the test subjects.

"Green, you bastard…"

Green flashed a sly smile at Red, wasting no time in gloating. "What? It's not like any of this concerns you."

"Then why would you need us for this science-fair project of yours?"

"Curiosity, really."

"All of this.. for.. inspired innovation?"

Red couldn't wrap his head around this inane ideology presented to him by Green. For these means to, somehow, in any way, justify any end was beyond my understanding. Something quintessential about it bothered my quintessence.

Red, dejected, sighed and slowed himself to a halt before he could get ahead in this race of theirs. "Blue, c'mon! We'll come back la—"

Red, hearing a sword clanging to his right, squinted at the sensational spectacle of blue and green bursts and sparks before him.

"Don't look at me crazy, crazy!" Blue blurted. "Green-guy was tryna catch you off-guard!"

His memories took hold, but only for a moment. "Oh, uh.. Thanks." Red awkwardly scratched his left shoulder, not knowing how to respond to Blue's attentiveness.
"..Anyways, let's get a move on, Blue."

Green laughed maniacally. "After all of this, you think you can just walk away unscathed?"

"Yep."

"Really?"

"Mhm."

The room, although undefined by Euclidean law, was beginning to grow in humidity. The air crackled with electricity—a pulsating aura of calculated instability.

"What in the…"

Red flames scorched their surroundings and purified it, returning everything back to its original, fixed state. In fact, everything looked more refined than how it was before. Everything felt more.. True?

"You're welcome," Red cockily finger-gunned at the father and son. "Don't expect me to do that next time you try and 'trick' us, though."

"Woah, you've gotta be magic or something—"

"Shut up. We're leaving now."

Red swiftly pushed Blue backwards into the same rift they entered through, following closely behind.

Green and Purple, still in dismal disbelief, glanced at each other. Their weary countenances evident to each other, both blandly returned to the silence the lab was in before the two rabble-rousers arrived, Purple stepping back into his sad shell and Green typing away at his Terminal.

"Interesting. Very Interesting."

Episode 7 - A Moment of Recessitude

"And that's the whole turn of events so far," I sigh, relieved to finally finish my recounting of our exploits.

Red, Blue and Yellow sit lethargically inside a Tokyo food court. Red is solemnly sipping a liter of soda to his side, his words and wishes presently omitting themselves from the conversation. Meanwhile, Blue is quickly demolishing a tub of Belgian waffle-fries in front of him, and Yellow is comfortably downing a bowl of udon noodles.

"And why exactly did you feel the need to track me down and tell me all of this?" Yellow asks.

"We need you for brainstorming."

"What makes you think I'm any good at that?"

Red chuckles, knowing full well of how much of a nerd Yellow is. "You look like the type to write books for fun."

"Pfft. Please, I'm not that proactive," Yellow laughs. "You're a funny bunch though, so I don't mind helping."

"So, why'd we leave the lab?" Blue questions, waffle-fries protruding from his mouth.

"The fight got boring," Red candidly responds.

"How, though? It was getting good when they started double-teaming you.."

"Thought so too. After seeing the stuff they're willing to do out of curiosity, though.. Ugh."

Blue nods understandingly, still stuffing his face with fries. "Shouldn't that be motivation to fight them?"

"Nah. It means there's no reasoning with them."

"There's gotta be something we can do, though…"

Yellow sets his chopsticks down, wiping his mouth before interjecting. "Well, with Green, you need to beat the sense back into him."

"Beat the—sense into him?" they both ask, puzzled.

An interlude of intervention introduces itself. Red and Blue are hesitant to accept this as a plan, but Yellow is adamant in his advice.

"You're both strong enough to tango with him," Yellow grins. "Y'all just need a plan."

"Well.. then, what's the plan?"

Episode 8 - Passage Peak

Red and Blue stare upwards at the insurmountable inscription of unforgiving, tectonic terrain. Then, they glance back down to survey their map.

"What're we doing here..?" Red irritably inquires.

"I ain't got a clue," Blue responds.

Yellow had left them there a few hours prior, promising he'd be back. It's apparent that he isn't, though.

"..Is it just me or.. did something just pop up on top of that mountain..?"

Something, what looks to be an entire entanglement of edifices, did pop up on top of the mountain in front of us. The most concerning part, though, is that I've seen it before. For context, nothing short of calamity and universal laws remain within my memory.

"..Should we just leave?" Red considers. "No, Yellow brought us here for a reason."

Blue turns to me, seeing the worry pervading my otherwise levelheaded expression.

"You—want—to go up that mountain? You don't have to if you don't want to.."

"Nah, I'm not going to bed on this."

Atop the rocky spine of Earth, far above the clouds, do the assortment of colors sojourn. At their speed, though, the journey matches the likeness of a short hike.

Passing along the beaten path, carvings scattered throughout the mountainous base begin to light up.

"What in the world..?" Blue mutters.

Bundles of air dance with sparks of light, crackling with boundless energy. The sky, turned monotonous white, warps wantonly around Red and Blue. The ground crumbles beneath them, their footing now nonexistent.

"Are we stuck in a cloud?!" Blue yelps.

"No.. dumbass—"

The floor reappears, but more akin to concrete rather than quartzite and other metamorphic rocks. "—we're somewhere else in the galaxy, though." The golden sigils light their path, appearing before them along a winding pathway forward.

"Vaulted Vernacular..? I haven't seen those characters in ages," Red says, his eyes squinting, then widening. "'Lacrimae Lapis,' that's what they spell out…"

"Wow, I'm impressed. Nobody usually knows how to read that," a voice echoes.

Red readies his fists. "Who goes there?"

"..The Defender of Dreams?"

"Who the hell is that?"

"Do you really not know who I am? From my voice, at least?" it queries, sounding somewhat disappointed. "The Genesis of Goodness..?"

"Nope."

"So, you came here with no prior knowledge.. whatsoever?"

"We didn't know we were going to end up here. Ugh.. We just came here with a friend," Red sighs.

"Oh, well then—"

The curtains of Chroma coalesce to form arms and legs, particles piercing the fabric of reality's attire.

"—allow me to introduce myself..!"

Those absent appendages notated by nothingness are now conjoined by capricious constructs with the sole purpose to annex. They're far from comprehensible, materializing as an eldritch abomination of sorts.

"I am Veryn, the Savior of Somnium—what you all may know as this world."

Veryn's words barely get through to Red. Their 'eyes' are like black holes. Nothing escapes them.

"My background should be of no concern. I'm simply here to educate you, Red."

Their garments blend with the white void engulfing Veryn and Red, presumably consubstantial with it. Red, noticing his lack of address towards Blue turns to where Blue was, seeing that he's nowhere to be found.

"Eh? Wait, where's Blue—"

"I placed him and Yellow back in Tokyo. Erased their memories as well," Veryn reassures. "It's just you and me up here."

"Hey, I'm not a big fan of witchcraft, so cut it out."

"Chill out, I'm only here to set you on the right path hereafter."

"Right path my ass. Make this quick before I blow this whole place to space."

"Haha.. so hot-headed! The sacred texts were right about you," the ethereal entity laughs carefreely. "Red, never going to bed."

Red feels a hand on his shoulder, in which they've suddenly rematerialized behind him.

"You haven't told any of them your true intentions, hm? To convene and combine into the original god your colors once reflected—"

"I haven't an iota of what you spout," Red retorts.

"..I'm not saying I disagree with your ideals, but honesty is the best policy in this situation."

"Then, what? You suppose I just tell them and they'll believe me?"

"Not at your current position. If you gain their trust, however, then it's a different story."

A prolonged quietude cuts like a knife between the two, considerations flowing about in Red's isolated cognition.

"...What do I do?" Red despondently huffs. "How am I supposed to gain their trust if I can't even remember why I want to meet with them—"

"I can remind you why."

Episode 9 - Sovereign

Once upon a starry sky, there ruled a Sovereign. He was a knightly, noble king who cared for the lives of all his subjects, and could remember each by name and face.

The lands his kingdom was settled upon, the Black Desert, however, directly contrasted with his kind, caring nature, as it was constantly plagued with war and bloodshed. One day, he bravely stepped into battle and with a single swing, ended every battle everywhere, all at once. From thenceforth, not only was he recognized as the ruler of Lacrimae Lapis, but of the Black Desert itself.

The blank haziness parts, revealing a metropolis—nay, a utopia. The strangely-shaped skyscrapers overhead reach well into the heavens as if they were humanity's prosthetics, curiously poking at the unknown. Fauna and flora faithfully fill every crevice, despite the eerie lack of human presence.

Veryn and Red carefully tread the streets of sacred land. I can feel my soul lifting with every step.

"You're a hero!" they'd say. "A true king!"

Veryn sorrowfully smiles, placing the theatrics aside for a moment. "He knew he wasn't, though."

"..Why?"

"I'll let you figure that out for yourself. Long story short, his dirty, little secret was weighing heavily on him; so, he would attempt to split his power across several mediums of Truth, each Truth resembling different levels of light emission."

"So, you mean to say—"

"You lot carry remnants of the Sovereign. Though, I must say, you resemble him the most."

This influx of information weighs heavily on Red's mind. All he can manage to do is ask questions.

"..'He would attempt to split'..?" Red questions.

Veryn's smile lowers into a small frown. "Well, he failed to fully rid of his secret by splitting his power across your beings. Thus, Avía was born."

Red's gasps as his stomach folds in on itself, the churning and gurgling of acids audible. The very sound of 'Avía' shakes him to his core. It scares him. It eats at him.

I walk over to a nearby fountain, pained. Peering into my reflection, I inadvertently spot a silhouette—something evil.

Its emotionless smile bears a hole right through my being. Its emotionless smile leers lovingly into my poisons and pains of living.

It's that emotionless smile that bears the bane of my existence forevermore. It's that emotionless smile that represents all the faults in my world.

That emotionless smile had revealed itself to me through every nook and cranny it could ever since my substance of self crossed the Styx; and now, it has found its way back to haunt me—to take away the last shred of sanity I held that classified me as my own, centered self.

"..That name is the reason why you seek your 'brethren,' Red. You're drawn to them, as they're drawn to you. You need them, and they need you."

I can feel each individual breath I rapidly inhale and exhale, though it's left me besotted. The light is slowly leaving my eyes, figuratively and literally.

"Ahem... Remember my words, Red, and heed them well," Veryn booms. "You and your brethren must gather to defeat that demon. Missing even one piece of the puzzle means that all hope is lost."

"It is trivial whether you lot decide to return to one single truth or remain a band of misfits, so long as you all work together. Do you understand?"

"..y..yeah..."

"Very well," Veryn nods, turning their back on Red. "Envoys of The Miasma are en route, so be ready. Those cretins will be after me; though, if you wish to seek further guidance in the future, which you will, I shall remain here."

I daintily fall on my back and my eyes blankly meet the endless expanse of stars. I can barely process Veryn's warning, focusing only on the stars. Hmm.. now that I think about it..

they look a lot like..

like...

Episode 10 - Rocked by Rocks

"Red!" reverberates a voice, ringing loud inside Red's ears.

"..Uff!"

"Wake up, boy!" Yellow yells. "Blue's getting his shit rocked by a bunch of rocks!"

Newly impassioned by his encounter with Veryn, Red recoils from his spot on the cracked concrete almost immediately. No questions asked, nor needed.

"Where to?"

"Somewhere by the Sumida River! Over yonder in that direction," Yellow directs, pointing west of where they currently were. "Go help him while I evacuate the civilians!"

Red surveys the area before running off. Everything is in ruin. Images of Lacrimae Lapis in a similar setting flash faintly in Red's headscape.

"Don't dawdle, dude—" and off he goes. The only thing that can match Red's fury is the roaring flames engulfing the city.

Blue's war cries are heard miles away by Red, wherein garrisons of golems are constantly charging at Blue from every side.

"KABOOOOOM!" Blue bellows, destroying a group of golems with merely his voice.

A gigantic tower of extraterrestrial stone summoning golems around it looms behind Blue, only to be finger-gunned to oblivion by Blue.

"THERE GOES YOUR TOWER—WATCH IT CRUMBLE!"

A few of the golems run away in fear, but Blue speeds over to them and whacks them with the blunt of his sword.

"FEEL ZAAA POWAAAA—"

Out of an alien rift hidden amongst the summoning towers surrounding Blue, a supersized golem sprints at Blue and squarely lands a hit on him, their fist the size of the Kaaba. Blue lays in the river, almost amused by his own arrogant display. He's too dizzy to laugh, however.

"Again, you need to be more focused than that, silly boy," Red recalls.

The giant golem raises both arms to smash Red into the ground; albeit, not without consequence.

"And when will you idiots learn that surprise attacks won't work?"

Red kicks the earthen beast in its torso, sending it flying into one of the summoning towers.

"Get up, man," Red says, lending Blue his hand. "We're gonna kick Green's ass after we deal with these blockheads—"

In an instant, the golem reappears behind Red, with a blinding speed near equal to Blue's.

"—holy shi—"

"Try blocking this," Green grins, controlling the golem from the comfort of his laboratory. With the command of single input, the mass of rock lobs its fist at Red. Unsurprisingly, it doesn't manage to connect with Red.

"Rend."

Before Green could counterattack, a world-ending cleave slashes past the golem and into the fulcrum, parting the clouds, buildings, and anything else unfortunate enough to be in the blade's trajectory.

"Oh.. give me a big, fat break!"

"..Haa.. thanks," Red sighs. "So, was this all Green's fault?"

"Dunno. That was the first time he showed up this entire time."

"..Then, who's responsible for all of thi—"

"Look up."

An even larger shadow shifts slightly above the entirety of Tokyo. Red didn't notice until now, but the extra anger he perceives is all due to it.

"Oh.. you've gotta be kidding me."

Episode 11 - Aboard the Vagabond

A ghastly ship, sailing silently amongst the clouds, always hiding just out of Red and Blue's viewpoint. They can still sense its shape of spiritual energy, though people

"Collateral damage is acceptable as of now, boy," Red sternly states.

"Roger that," Blue comedically salutes.

Meanwhile, inside the ship…

"Two unidentified life-forms are rapidly approaching the base of the ship, ma'am," the deck cadet informs the captain. "Permission to fire at them?"

"..Let them come," an ominous voice masked by tenebra responds, reverberating throughout the captain's ramshackle cabin.

Her attire is ragged, holes protruding her royal-red overcoat, but not her silken-white undershirt. A flower heads her long, messy, blood-red hair, which lists lightly over her left eye. The rest of her body is covered in dark, transparent nylons, save her face. Her eyes, painted a pearly pink, shift shakily about in excited anticipation for the unfolding events.

She stands, still behind her desk as she addresses her subordinate. "I've been meaning to take out some steam on some poor fools."

The cadet leaves the room, promptly shutting the steel door behind them. When the captain could ensure her lonesome, she smiles, staring outside her circular window and out into the Earth below.

"Once upon a time, there was a man," she starts, speaking only to herself, "a wandering soul;"

On her desk lay laminated papers of esoteric origin, their true nature only known to her. The inscriptions of ancient sigils—Vaulted Vernacular—line the documents from head to toe.

"Lost in the realm of our kingdom."

The sigils light into a golden text, rescrambling to form coherent sentences. Words and letters float around her like a dyson sphere, though she starts siphoning all of their energy.

"They say he was a king who fought a great war."

She rests her head on a closed fist, her head tilting as she sees Red and Blue flying towards her ship in the far-off distance.

"When the dragons came into our kingdom and burnt everyone with a roar."

The ship rumbles with rapturous roars of fracas, the crew having engaged in epic battle with Red and Blue already.

"Once upon a time there was a kingdom, a beautiful one."

With the raise of a hand, the captain seals the steel door shut, so she can finish her incantations. She isn't the least bit worried.

"Surrounded in the darkness of an ancient war."

Red's gaze waywardly navigates the deck for any trace of the head honcho. They're nowhere to be seen, however. Endless seas of crew-hands swing and shoot at Red and Blue from all angles, though none manage to even scratch them.

"They say there was a king, this wandering soul;"

"Red, up here!" Blue redirects, motioning for Red to follow him through the inner facilities. When inside, they find there to be an exceedingly futuristic interior larger than a Texan football stadium.

"Who's cursed by a demon, forever, to watch his own realm rise and fall."

The golden text imbues itself within the captain's essence, her body now glowing with divine vitality.

Red's brows furrow, as he can subliminally, succinctly sense their presence. "We need to hurry up. Something weird's happening up ther—"

"..Hello?" echoes a dissonant voice.

The two snap their attention to the unseen instigator. It's just a pale, teenage girl, hiding behind a pole.

"Eh? What're you doing on this ship..?" Blue approaches.

"..T-They took me away," she shivers, "an-and.. they told me that they'd experiment on me, or something..."

Before Blue can venture too close towards her, Red extends an arm in front of him. "There's something wrong with their eyes."

Inside their eyes lies an epitaph born of a runic device. "Vaulted Vernacular."

"..Jeez."

A tepid, turbid smog surrounds the girl, transforming and assimilating into her. Now, a mauve malevolence situates itself before its newest audience.

"If I had more time to prepare, I could've organized something more convincing.. Ugh!" she squawks, stamping her feet. "Surely, you two haven't defeated all of my lackeys already..?"

Red and Blue both look at each other, then at the sizable entryway behind them. "I think we just lost them."

She facepalms, rubbing her temples 'till they turn red. "You know what, it doesn't even matter."

"..As the Firstborn of Miasma and captain of this ship, I humbly welcome you both aboard the Vagabond," she speaks through gritted teeth.

"Cut the formalities," Red frowns. "What are you idiots trying to accomplish, invading our planet like this?"

"You couldn't comprehend why if I gave you a millenia to con—Wait a minute..."

The maven struts down a flight of steps, leveling with Red and Blue. She leans into Red's eyes, searching for something, it seems to Red. Maybe my soul?

"Knowing Vaulted Vernacular... the lava in your heart... the flames in your eyes," she observes. "You're of the Sovereign."

"And what of it?"

The maven ignores Red, now making her way to Blue. "Hmm.. an oscillating ocean in your eyes. You're also of the Sovereign. How exciting!"

"Huh? Who's the Sovereign???"

"I'll tell you later," Red nudges at Blue. "What business do you have here, creep?"

"Just an old debt that must be paid—in blood."

Red, for once, takes a deep breath and considers analyzing her. If it's worked for Yellow, it might as well work for me. Let's see here... Fuck all, I'm gonna get to guessing.

"..You're Mallor, aren't you?"

The girl wraps an arm around Red's neck and holds a dagger to his throat, alarmed by his knowledge of her. Blue aims to rush to Red's aid, but Red gestures for him to stop.

"How do you know my name, boy?"

Fuck, that was easy.

"Lucky guess, I guess," Red mockingly smirks. "Since I know who you are, I recommend you actually tell me why you're here."

A scowl spreads across Mallor's face as she mutters a few things under her breath, which Red can barely discern. Out of all of her utterances, however, he can only make out the words, "Lacrimae Lapis."

An indescribable, indiscriminate irritation wells up within Red, partially from earlier.

There's a special kind of residual anger settling in my soul. For whatever duty I feel I have in this world, it is somehow connected to that place. Through the Sovereign's will most likely, but why? How am I able to feel his feelings? Questions for later.

"I don't know what business you have with that place, but I think it's best you leave this planet."

"See, I just can't do that," she sighs, tightening her grip around him.

"And why's that?"

Again, she goes searching in Red's eyes, delving into his soul's deepest, darkest secrets. "The treasure that lay dormant in that place... It's too valuable to turn a blind eye to."

"I'll give you a blind eye, then," Red glowers.

Episode 12 - The Maven of Miasma

Yellow gazes upward at the Vagabond with a worried look. "Hmm.. Should I help..?"

All the summoning towers have already been reduced to dust by Yellow. All that remains is the wreckage from the battle.

"Goodness, this'll be a lot of cleaning up to do."

"Looks like it."

"Ye-ep," Yellow nods, keeping a tight-lipped smile as if he were casually conversing with a co-worker. That's when he remembers that he's at least 500 meters in the air, with a bird's-eye view of the entirety of Tokyo.

He raises an eyebrow and vigorously looks around his vicinity. There's nobody there, however.

"Maybe fixing stuff will fix me right up…"

A thundering crash carries for miles across, shattering the sound barrier with a sonic boom. Yellow takes a deep breath and recites an incantation of the Vaulted Vernacular. "Ethereal Emissary: Pyrithial Aeternam. Protect Prompt."

An energy barrier of inert physical forces forms in less than a second, the shape of a hexagonal crystal encapsulating all of Tokyo.

Immediately after the forcefield is conjured, Mallor, who's holding Blue by the foot, comes into Yellow's view and slams Blue against the top vertice of the forcefield.

A numbing pain penetrates Blue's back, the slam shattering his vertebrae.

"PUTAAAAAA—"

Red hails from the heavens to haul a harrowing hit onto Mallor's right cheekbone. Mallor, unfazed by his speed, parries his punch with minimal difficulty.

Her expression shows a degree of offense taken, that Red would ever consider a punch like that would connect. She grabs his other arm and kicks him in the stomach, sending him into the stratosphere and parting the clouds near and far between.

Blue grits his teeth, grabbing at Mallor's feet with hopes of her attention being averted by Red. She flashes a sly smile at Blue, not having forgotten his presence in this fight for a moment.

"Carpe diem," she resounds, the weight of her words creating cracks in the concrete hundreds of meters below.

She lifts her leg obtusely into the air and aims it at Blue's face, her foot crashing onto his skull before Blue could blink.

"Ever been beaten up by a woman?"

What follows is an uncomfortably lengthy silence between the two imposing figures, one of them taken in by complete and utter bemusement.

"..You're a... woman?"

The other, however, is furious.

"RAHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH," Blue roars.

Energy emanates from Blue's body, his veins surging with raw emotion—mostly anger. With this extraneous energy, for a split second, and only in that split second, does he manage to overpower Mallor.

"What in the—"

"ROLLING [AZURE]WRATH: REALITY'S RUSHED REND[ITION]."

Blue's right arm, now bursting with blue, makes a slicing motion upwards. A wave of visibly blue photons flows from his right arm in a crescent shape of invisible crescendo, cleaving completely through the constants of time and space. The blue of the sky is sucked in by its rebellious nature, wherein everything turns black for this split second. The slice succinctly shows dominion over causality itself in its otherworldly structure.

Mallor barely manages to move out of the attack's trajectory, her arm cut clean off by it. The crescent cut passes Mallor by, continuing towards the Vagabond and bisecting it like a hot-molten knife to butter. The finite fold of reality's hold on the Earth shifts ever-so-slightly as well, warping the world around the slash 'till it ceases to exist from its own destructive ability, its structure imploding in on itself a few astronomical units away. Anything in between its beginning and end can be assumed erased indefinitely.

The Maven of Miasma, frightened by this sudden display of power, retreats to the front-half of the Vagabond. It is still autonomously functioning, but repairs would need to be made elsewhere.

"Ship, set a course to—"

Red plummets back down to the Earth, on account of his own stubbornness. His less-than-smooth landing onto the front-half of the Vagabond knocks away any shred of sense Mallor has left, leaving her dazed on the cold, metallic floor of the control cabin.

Blue, exasperated, lay dormant atop the hexagonal crystal. Red, who's about as beaten as Blue, sits cross-legged atop the Vagabond, evaluating the damage made to the city below and to the ship that cradles him. To my surprise, most of it's already fixed.

"You two got decked," Yellow taunts, popping in behind Red.

"..Ha… We sure did."

Episode 13 - Continuity

Purple sits at Green's desk—Green being currently out of the building—rigorously reading what appears to him as a translucent manuscript containing the fate of Esse itself. He's been reading to himself for what feels to be—.

"'—hours'... Wait…"

He's confused by the utilization of these narrations, seeing as it has accurately depicted Purple's observation of Red and Blue's escapades, and is now…

"Hello? I know you can hear me, whoever you are…"

The writer of the transcripts sits strategically behind an invisible wall, far beyond the reach of any pair of perceptive eyes.

"It was a good thing that Yellow guy didn't see me," the looming figure sharply exhales.

"I can see you over there—"

"Eh..?"

Purple stares straight up at the looming figure, his eyes immersed in stormy waters of the fourth dimension. The figure momentarily superimposes itself onto an untouched fifth-dimensional space to move itself from his view.

"If I stand incredibly still, I'll become invisible to the naked eye…"

Thereafter, an extreme standoff between the two.

Back on Earth…

"..Huh?"

Green is politely sat in front of Mallor, sipping a steamy cup of chai. In fact, they're both knelt at a Japanese tatami table, another steaming cup of chai in front of Mallor.

"I'm aware that you're a big celebrity around the cosmos, Maven of the Miasma," Green bows.

"..Were you the one summoning those golems?" Mallor questions.

"Only to make headway for you, of course."

"Uh-huh… And why, exactly, are we in the same city I fought those numbskulls over?" she says, gazing out a nearby window. "They could be searching for me right now…"

"Not to worry, I cloaked our auras," Green grins. "Anyways, we'll be out in a jiffy if you can… comply with my singular, humble request."

"Which is..?"

Green shifts somewhat from his spot, scooting closer towards Mallor.

"Be my secret friend."

A green arm extends across the table, awaiting her reciprocated approval.

"For what purpose?"

"Should we be focusing on that now, or later?"

"N—"

"Later. The answer is later."

She tilts her head inquisitively, her eyes moving from the master operator before her and down to the boiling-hot tea occupying her senses. Her reflection testifies to her reverence for the tale as old as time, and to serve in a greater part of it, even as an associate of Green… It would not perturb the Miasma, would it?

"Hmm… What's in it for me?"

Yellow and Red search for Blue in the vastness of Tokyo, having made reparations, wondering if he's even still in Tokyo.

"Where could he've gone?" Red cogitates. "Wait—what if he got taken?"

"That's a possibility, but let's not assume that."

"Man," Red interjects. "And just who was that.. that girl?"

"..The one shaking Green's hand right now, in that teahouse over there?"

"Eh—"

Before Red and Yellow could intervene, Green and Mallor dissipate into thin air. The two hurry over to the room their foes previously convened, sourly standing over the sorry scene.

"Fuck! We let them slip away…"

"All good," Yellow reassures. "We'll find another opportunity soon."

Red feverishly facepalms, his hand sliding down his visage. "Seriously, who is that crazy girl…?" He drops to the floor, exhausted from whatever tricky business he's gotten himself wedged into.

Yellow plops down beside him. "Do you.. really not know? She's of the Paradigms of Somnium."

"One of.. THE.. Paradigms??" Red bewilderedly beseeches.

"..You should really keep up with politics."

"Whew.. Fuck that."

Yellow closes his eyes and leans leniently on the table next to the two of them, recounting the history of jurisdiction within Chroma.

"...Last time I checked, Chroma's Paradigm was.. that one old guy—"

"—Yeah. People have no idea where he went, and overall, the nature of Mallor's rise to power right after his disappearance was pretty suspicious," Yellow states, sipping on some of Green's leftover tea. "She didn't even have a solid campaign."

"..Maybe people were desperate..?"

"I doubt it. We had some other pretty good picks," Yellow says, dismissively swatting at the air, "Haa... Catastrophes must've struck."

"Catastrophes..."

Catastrophes, a race of recherché warriors from ages past, all of which specialized in different derivations of Color Theory, which itself derives from a more primordial power intangible to most. Mortals often refer to it as 'truth.'

A municipality, or in other terms, a multiverse, is often defined and separated from others by traces of 'truth' unique to it, and the capacity it has to hold 'truth.' Chroma is one of many municipalities, as well as a notable nexus point for.. 'Catastrophes.'

"Why're you blaming it on our own race, though?" Red wonders, cracking up a bit. It's easy to identify Catastrophes, especially when you are one yourself.

"Well, for one, Mallor announced that she'd bring about the resurgence of them."

"But that's.. literally not possible!"

Almost all of the Catastrophes were wiped out after an indelible incident occurred, some time before the jurisdiction of Paradigms came to be. Since then, Somnium has been in ruin, and the scarcity of Catastrophes has led only the few remaining from the incident in their numbers. No rise, nor fall.

"Not without Green's help, probably."

Red's mind goes back to the sinister scene he bore witness to in Green's lab. The grotesque, humanoid specimens encapsulated in elaborate test tubes. Those were Catastrophes.

"There's no way…"

"Where there's a will.. there's a way."

Be there a will and its way, never should the existence and essence of a matter of this severity extend towards egress outside of hypotheticals. With the withered state the world is currently in, be there a rise or fall in Catastrophes, collapse will take place on a multiversal scale.

"..We have to stop them."

Yellow nods in amicable agreement. "We should probably find Blue first, though."

"Where could that boy have gone?"

Episode 14 - Sinking

Blue awakens, but in an eerily unfamiliar turbidity.

"Hola?" he calls, no response given. "Weird."

Endless night emasculates the setting, the only light present emanating from esoteric sigils of unknown origin to Blue lining the sorry skies. Suspirations of death and decay smog the area, wherein the air smells of hell. The ground shakes unsurely with each second he remains stagnant, so he starts to meander meaninglessly around the sodden seclusion.

Rain pitters and patters onto broken leaves like weak fingers that drum against a window, the sound alone downtrodden enough to mollify the hardest of hearts.

Blue feet sink swiftly into the viscous quicksands, so he picks up his pace mindfully. He is sauntering soulfully, scared. He is sprinting frantically. A blind, blue blur—blazing.

He's hauling himself away from an infinite, invisible mass of malice following to swallow him whole. With his stamina abating, the storms of suspirations surge, knocking him down towards the terrain.

Sitting up from his tumble, he scrubs his index and thumb, closely observing the inky residue covering him from head to toe. In his carelessness, Blue's guard lays down beside him, allowing him to the mass of malice.

"Eww—WHAT THE FUCK—" Blue screams, as millions of arms grown from the turbidity grab ravenously at him. It is almost instantly after all of the appendages have a hold of Blue that he sinks completely into the inky depths of the darkness below.

"—AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA—pukes cutely—AHHHHHHHH—"

"SHUT UP!" an annoyed voice resonates.

"..Yes, sir…"

Blue, none the wiser, fails to question the autonomous dialogue escaping his mouth and the mysterious change in milieu. He sits politely at the end of a table almost fictional in properties, larger in length than a colosseum and wider than an aged maple tree. Chandeliers more sizable than the fountains dotting the dance floor hang high over the heads of all the distinguished guests, who are dressed in gowns and suits far ahead of the trends' times, at least back then.

"What the…" Blue marvels, drooling at the food adorning the table. It's a surprise to him that he can't recall the existence of some.

The boisterous banquet hall of golden glamor and blue banners builds the beautiful view into more than some fancy spectacle made for recreation.

"Save your wild energy for later, boy," the voice sighs. When Blue turns slightly to his left, he sees a tall, white-haired and bearded man shaking his head, almost smiling, but also frowning. "Have you no respect for your own birthday party?"

Blue blinks, bewildered. "My.. birthday?"

The man raises an eyebrow interrogatively, reaming the steak on his plate with his fork and knife. "Did you lose yourself after the other children struck you? Hm.. too roughly, I suppose."

"…I guess."

The man clicks his tongue, mouthing breathlessly, "I ought to learn those rabble rousers later."

Blue squints at his company, this entire situation flying far above Blue's capacity to rationalize.

"Gah.. Go outside, get some fresh air, or anything, really," the man insistently suggests, shooing away at Blue. "Refresh your mind, please. I wish not to take this up with your father and be blamed for it."

Blue tilts his head after hearing, "father," but buries his confusion deep down below his headspace's surface. He shrugs and nods agreeably, continuing his meandering from earlier, albeit much less afraid than he was ago.

The veranda of the venue is vivacious with a jungle of variable life-forms.

Each blade of grass is light-blue in hue, as well as the leaves falling gracefully from the hundreds of hand-shaped trees planted about the reserve. Pink water reflects the world in a pastel view of unimagined likeness, which Blue peers into with a stupid smile on his face.

The presence of phoenixes, ogres, gnomes, and other mythical creatures grace this sacred space. The fair fairies convulse and cry upon contact with Blue's stench.

Colors of any kind can be found at any corner or cranny of the jungle, which ended into an amicable cove by the seaside shore.

Blue strolls through it all in childlike amusement. "Goofy ahh cloud," he comments, pointing at a gun-shaped cumulus cloud. The shimmer of the setting sun peeking over the horizon strikes his eyes quickly proceeding his remark, prompting his aimless laughter.

Then, something else catches his eye, in the remoteness of his peripherals—a person. The stranger carries an arid air about them that stings Blue to be within range of. Looks-wise, they appear relatively normal, their flamboyant wardrobe matching that of the other invitees of Blue's birthday bash. The unsettling difference that stirs discretely inside Blue's mind, however, is their color-contrasting irises. Her left eye, devoid of coloration, completely conflicts with her right eye, which is a dull blue.

"Have you ever seen something quite as curious as…"

The stranger's words trail off into incoherent incantations, her eyes enraptured by the elegant sight before her.

"..this sunset?"

She nervously smirks, silently nodding. "You're the birthday boy, yes..?"

He tilts his head, anxiously answering, "Yes?"

"Well, then, it's a pleasure to meet you. My name is Vanora."

Blue wants to tilt his head further, but can't. He swears to have heard that name elsewhere. In spite of this confusion, Blue's body reaches out to offer her a handshake, which is easily reciprocated.

"Likewise, Vanora!" Blue gleefully grins. Internally, however, Blue is disturbed by his high-society formalities. Jeez, what's going on with me??

"Mhm… Are you this formal with women, usually?"

WOMA—"Not necessarily, but you're far too enchanting to shy away from."—N.. NI### WHAT?!

Something begins becoming more apparent as the conversation drones on, and on, and on… until something clicks. The fancy stuff, my weird accent, her weird accent, and my politeness… Am I.. in the future???

An intangible slap from beyond his own consciousness sets his thought process straight. I'm in the past?! That same slap pats him on the head and rewards his correct assumption.

Eerily enough, the conversation between Blue's past self and Vanora comes to a halt, with Vanora staring directly into Blue's irises. She smirks sinisterly. "You do have a clue, after all…"

Blue, now with newly attained control over his own body and the continuity of this distant memory, backs away in fear. I can't feel my powers… The scene shifts back into the inky darkness from before, and what Blue sees melts away with his torrid tears.

"Let's run that back now, shall we?" she beams, her left eye glistening. "I was hoping I could sift through your entire backstory in one go, but you got too smart, too early through it."

I can't feel my head… I can't feel my.. I can't feel.

Blue's brain tingles with tenebra, the memories he has of the past few minutes whittling away one by one. "What.. are you.. doing.. to me?"

"Nothing personal, really," she shrugs. "I'm only acquiring intel for my boss."

The beaten boy irradiates the turbidity by way of his blue light, nearly freeing himself, but ultimately without egress.

"Ahh, you're pretty strong. No wonder why they think of you and your kin as threats to their plan…"

"..Who?"

"Cares," Vanora teases, giggling to herself as the curtains close on Blue's body and mind.

"Maybe I should restrict his thoughts more, next time…"

She puts a tad more extra thought into her considerations, openly acknowledging the flaws in her first evaluation.

"..And if this next one doesn't work out, I'll think to watch from afar."

Episode 15 - Kaleidoscope

The pair powers peacefully through the world, following Blue's scent. It eventually leads them down into a liminal-looking subway station in the outskirts of Tokyo, off-setting emptiness pervading the place of sinister space. A warped rift of elliptic shaping, visibly stirring the space around it, is barely visible in their collective view. It diminishes in size like a breath in cold air, bating in its breathed life.

"Should we go in?"

"It's where Ergo leads, so I guess so."

Red shrugs, sprinting straight into the rift as Yellow follows cautiously behind. It appears to not have led them elsewhere, more akin to an open archway. In a delayed rush, the subway shifts hyperbolically, the earth trembling with an unknown power. The ceiling splits open and the city folds in on itself, though the atoms refuse to make contact. Then it folds out, and back in. Over and over it glitches, though mayhaps the design presents itself purposefully.

After lingering behind the rift, "puzzlement" perfectly portraying their present visage, shadows spread and cast their agonizing glare on the strange space.

It is a definitively divergent, dark mien of existence, curating a cautious flow of negative energy throughout rather than positive energy. The image of the barely visible outline of the twisted, turning city bears a hole into their hearts.

The sky, the ground, and the intricacies of Creation between are unseen by their eyes, the palpable darkness—that may as well have a heartbeat—triumphant over all.

"Huh.. follow me," Yellow enunciates, motioning at Red.

Glowing sigils satiate the abyss around them. Their steps illuminate a hopeful pathway forward; one which goes past the dreary darkness, albeit in the very midst of it.

"How do you just.. know what you're doing?" Red marvels.

Yellow doubles over in disdain, sniffing the missive air. His senses are a slave to Blue's Esse. "That's the neat part, I don't."

His face scrunches in confusion. "I don't get it…"

"Aha.. Well, you see—"

Yellow proceeds to ramble on about his own Esse, Ergo. The explanation goes on and on, becoming more of a burden to listen to. In short, Yellow's Esse elicits the very answer to his problems and puts them into action, whether or not he understands either of the two. Too bad Ergo doesn't activate automatically. Could've avoided his yap, if so.

"Uhhh… Cool?"

Red stargazes sagely, connecting dots like constellations. "And that's how you got us to Passage Peak, huh?"

Yellow swivels like a turning table towards Red. "Passage Peak?"

I meet Yellow's dumbfounded visage, more perplexed than he is. Maybe Veryn had something to do with this.

"Nevermind, man," Red disdainfully dismisses. "Nah, what's that smell..?"

The air, arid, affixes itself to Red and Yellow's lungs, constricting like millions of invisible vices rancidly 'round them. The rancor rapidly increments to a foul odor, fighting with their noses. They instinctively identify the putrid proliferations as smelling salts, waking them from life.

With a gallant gesticulation from Red, would the arid air combust into sacred flames, dancing with newfound joy. The dancing delights reveal a rift, which the odor appears to outpour from.

"Why are there so many of these rifts showing up?"

"Someone's probably breaking the rules. Probably Green."

"Yeah, no shit."

Yellow tugs at the ends of the space-time rift, defiantly zipping the anomalous luggage of erroneous entropy back up. How did he learn to do that..?

The lack of putrid pollution mediates between the factors of balance of Creation's vivacity, recycling the negative energy into a positive one. With this, light finds its way past the absorption of darkness, egress eminent in the form of Red and Yellow's eyes. The rotating kaleidoscope gazes back at the two in a curious manner.

"Pretty," Yellow drones, mesmerized by the dreamy deluge of photons and matter, mixed meaninglessly to make meaning.

Fickle feelings of the duo's bliss bury the surrounding scene in altering coloration, corresponding to the flow of their ever-changing Esses.

"Everything looks like.. eyes…" Red shivers.

The infinite irises, peeking out from every facet of matter, play, poke, and prod at their souls. Yellow's crescent smile wanes, his mouth invisible under his scarf. "It burns. I-It.. burns…"

"We should leave, right now."

"But, Blue—"

"—Can wait," Red interposes. "The risk is unnecessary." The sinful scorches crawling on our backs are far more distinguished than what Blue and I felt back then, at Green's lab.

"A-Alright," Yellow falters, foundering. "…Where's the rift?"

Red's focus darts behind them on their pathway. The rift is gone, without a trace.

"Dammit. What the hell happened—"

A crashing conundrum collides against invisible walls. What follows immediately after is catastrophic—ba dum tss… "OH SHIT, WATCH OUT—"

Red leans over and grabs Yellow head, pushing it down with his. A streak of sunset dashes over Red and Yellow, minding itself as a stroke of paint finding its way across a finished canvas. Two figures burst forth from the fit of paint, the orange one slamming the purple pipsqueak across the strange subway station.

"OBLIVI——nope."

Several rifts in the continuum appear, dotting the area. Showers of light lacerate the landscape, leaving permanent scars in the dreary dimension.

"Don't question it—let's dip!"

Red and Yellow hurry out of the nearest point of egress, not checking to see which one led to their homeworld.

Episode 16 - Shining Shadow

Unrest never could've been clearer amongst the sovereigns. Their quarrels and quaffles had never heightened beyond mere side eyes and dirty looks instigating much dirtier matters than political.

"Those boisterous boys and their antics are causing a reverberating ruckus throughout the whole of Chroma."

"Nevermind Chroma! It may as well reach the entirety of Somnium if this keeps up!"

"Dangerous creatures; never should we have allowed their existence in the first place."

"Of course they're dangerous! What would you expect from those no good, gallivanting—"

"Silence!" screams an oppressive voice.

The tumultuous uproar ceases, as the Council's upper ranks calm the rest of the conference in no time.

"..Glad we have ourselves settled in," says the same voice. "I understand our disposition in regards to… those catastrophes."

Everyone nods in solemn agreement.

"Rifts and new dimensions not of this world are peering into ours, inviting ideas we do not yet have the manpower to efface—and I am sure you all understand what I mean by that."

Some hide their worried expressions, while others can't help but to gloat.

"I always said this stuff

Episode 17 - And Its Shimmering Shadow

Unused/Misc. Material

The aura of green, a symbol of life,
Radiates balance, dispelling strife.
A calming force, both wise and true,
With luck and growth in every hue.

The Void being a color or Boredom or Black.
Abilities: Inanis, Devasto, Essentia Mortis

Inanis: To empty ones being or remove all motion of themselves.
Devasto: Destroy all beings within ability Essentia Mortis: The Essence of Death

https://sites.google.com/view/heehee-remastered/the-yappening

Honestly, this is only if you think it's appropriate to do so, but I'd appreciate it if we could give the Colored Crusaders names that coincide with their respective colors.

Examples:

- Red — Erutheros XVI
- Orange — Nerola Gambino
- Yellow — Sol Invictus
- Green — Viri Veritas
- Blue — Rex Lapis
- Purple — Valephyra Rot

Red v. ???

"And because you've allowed yourself to wear the very fabric of what is wrong or what is right, you've given yourself an indelible rash without balm to assuage it."

- Arbiter

```
Declare character names for dialogue
define r = Character("Red", color="#ff0000")    # Red text color define b = Character("Blue", color="#0000ff")   # Blue text color define y = Character("Yellow", color="#ffe100") # Yellow text color define g = Character("Green", color="#00ff00")  # Green text color define p1 = Character("???", color="#9D00FF") define p2 = Character("Purple", color="#9D00FF") define o = Character("Orange", color="#FFA500") define bu1 = Character("Redneck", color="#ffe7ce") default preferences.text_cps = 20

Episode 1 Start
label start:
label episode_1:
    scene black
    with dissolve

    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 1 - Reflections" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    # Begin scene
    scene background1 with fade

    p1 "Throughout the cosmos, the blueprint of life was on course to becoming Creation’s newest experiment amongst the divine mediators and suzerains concerned."

    p1 "The sovereigns weren’t necessarily ones to be bothered with in this situation, but it was kept in the back of their recollection as all matters should in the grand scheme of things."

    p1 "As for the goal of this project, ‘twas self-sustainable mortals that were created to preserve and find meaning in their existence were in order."
```

```
    p1 "One day, however, whilst checking up on the preparatory progress made for existence’s newest test, one of the sovereigns fell into its own creation out of its own ostentatious obsession."

    p1 "This split its power across the space-time continuum into fragments of its original being, one for each primary color of the visible spectrum.."

    p1 "{=red_text}Red{/=red_text}, {=org_text}Orange{/=org_text}, {=ylw_text}Yellow{/=ylw_text}, {=grn_text}Green{/=grn_text}, {=blu_text}Blue{/=blu_text}, and {=ppl_text}Purple{/=ppl_text}."

    p1 "The main fragment, Red, wandered wantonly across the myriad of universes since time immemorial, not with a specific purpose in mind."

    p1 "All he knew was that he needed to feel “whole” once again“—{=red_text}--one way, or another{/=red_text}”, Red said, aimlessly ambling amidst the starlit sky. Little did he expect to find fortune in this particular starlit sky."

    r "{=red_text}What year would it be by now..? 2009 by humanity’s measurement?{/=red_text}"

    p1 "Taking a weary look around the wistful asteroid field whilst resting on a small piece of debris, Red saw nothing of particular interest and was just about to search elsewhere, until a voice rung loud in his head all of the sudden:
"
    b "{=blu_text}HELP{/=blu_text}" p1 "A spherical tear in space, monstrous in size, was visible in the next galaxy over, which was in the same direction as the odd screeching noise overhead."

    r "{=red_text}Let’s see here…{/=red_text}"

    p1 "Red arose and immediately flew over to investigate the scene, realizing that upon further inspection, the voice was coming from within the supermassive black hole."
```

```
    p1 "Though Red could easily resist the gravitational pull of the event horizon, it would be out of his power to pull out a lifeform caught in the center of it. Befuddled, he began brainstorming."

    r "{=red_text}Blasting it away would risk excessive collateral damage, and teleporting them away would only be a catalyst for brain damage...{/=red_text}"

    p1 "Space shook vehemently as blue aura emerged from the black hole, the encaged entity attempting to directly combat it with its own gravitational force."

    p1 "Alas, they fell just short of the power needed to tear the black hole apart, only being able to roar in absolute anguish as it ripped at its insides."

    p1 "{=red_text}“You need to be more focused than that, silly boy,{/=red_text}” Red gibed, suddenly appearing behind what appeared to be a blue being, similar in manner to Red."

    b "“{=blu_text}Well, what else am I supposed to do then?{/=blu_text}” {=blk_text}Blue retorted.{/=blk_text}" p1 "Reaching out his hand, Red resonated with the vacuum engulfing them both, causing an outrageous tremor which temporarily damaged the giant vacuum."

    b "{=blu_text}“..What was that?”{/=blu_text}"

    r "{=red_text}“Concentration. Try it out.”{/=red_text}"

    p1 "With a sassy snort and a sharp intake of breath afterward, Blue defiantly condensed his energy into the palm of his right hand, punching at the condensed mass."

    p1 "It created considerable corrosion upon contact, but it was sealed right back up instantaneously."

    b "{=blu_text}“You lie.”{/=blu_text}"
```

```
    r "{=red_text}“Nope, you just aren’t trying hard enough, dumbass.”{/=red_text}"

    p1 "Out of pure frustration, he threw a second punch, and then a devastating kick. Red’s eyes wandered about, observing the significant damage done to the black hole."

    r "{=red_text}“Look at you g—”{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}“Rend,”{/=blu_text} Blue boomed, cutting the black hole in half and effectively erasing it."

    p1 "Red, amused, patted Blue on the back."

    r "“How’d you get yourself into that issue, moron?” {=blk_text}Red teased.{/=blk_text}"

    p1 "Blue, unamused, shrugged Red’s hand off."

    b "{=blu_text}“Some green guy threw me in there a few minutes ago. Bet he’s long-gone by now, though.”{/=blu_text}"

    p1 "{=red_text}“Oh, that’s tough,{/=red_text}” Red apathetically responded. “{=red_text}Wait, isn’t space silent? How’re we—”{/=red_text}" p1 "Taking another glance at Blue, he seemed unfazed by the reasonable remark, so Red decided to let it slide."

    r "{=red_text}“..Meh, whatever. Anyways, you need some help getting somewhere, or..?”{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}“Nah, just forget this ever happened.”{/=blu_text}" p1 "In an instant, Blue sagaciously sped away faster than Red could react at the time, stepping to and fro from various bits of nearly invisible space dust."

    p1 "{=red_text}“Goofy. I’ll grab him soon,”{/=red_text} he ominously entailed, staring at nothing. He didn’t appear to be speaking to himself,
```

```
{=red_text}but that’s not important to the narrative right now, silly boys (and girls).{/=red_text}"

    scene black
    with dissolve
    jump episode_2  # Moves to the next episode

Additional episodes can be coded similarly
label episode_2:
    scene black
    with dissolve

    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 2 - Pursuit" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    # Begin scene
    scene background with fade

    r "{=red_text}You just seem like an interesting guy, is all.{/=red_text}"

    p1 "Blue slowly turned his head, staring back at Red."

    b "{=blu_text}Wha- How did yo-{/=blu_text}"

    r "{=red_text}So, what should I call you, slowpoke?{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}...{/=blu_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}Hmph.. Blue, just call me Blue{=blu_text}"

    r "{=red_text}Alright Blue. So.. anyways, could you tell me where we are?{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}Ahh.. lemme just...{/=blu_text}"
```

```
    p1 "Blue fumbled around in his worn-out pants' pockets, finding a dark-green contraption of intricate detailing. {=red_text}It was almost as if it were made to look fancy!{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}So.. according to this gizmo I snagged off the green dude, we're 'bout three.. 'astronomical units'.. from the edge, heh.. edge, of the Milky Way Galaxy, whatever that means.{/=blu_text}"

    r "{=red_text}Good, good. And.. by any chance, could we go meet this..
'green' guy that messed with you?{/=red_text}"

    b "{=blu_text}I mean, sure. I was going to go give him a piece of my mind anyway," Blue chuckled. "Apparently, he's on..
'Earth'..?{/=blu_text}"

    r "{=red_text}Got it, I know exactly where that is!{/=red_text}"

    r "{=red_text}C'mon, let's go.{/=red_text}"

    p1 "As Blue and Red journeyed to Earth, some oddly peculiar planets that weren't there as of the creation of this galaxy positioned themselves at their peripherals. "

    b "{=blu_text}You supposed to be the god of something? Like, the god of soup suppers?"

    r "{=red_text}Hah, funny.. funny stuff. I'm actually the god of strawberry jam"

    b "{=blu_text}So, do you taste good?"

    p1 "{=red_text}Don't even tell them what I did next."

    p1 "After a ten-minute trek through the countless cosmos and into the Milky Way, Blue and Red arrived on Earth, the most populated planet in the Milky Way."

    scene background2 with fade

    r "{=red_text}What 'realm' are we in, Blue?"
```

```
    b "{=blu_text}I ain’t got a clue how to pronounce this word.
Naaaaga-siki..? Ohh, Nagasakiiii."

    p1 "Red and Blue meandered about, searching for a short while before spotting a {=red_text}short, yellow figure atop an orange gate with pointy sides.{/=red_text}"

    p1 "He was clad in traditional clothing, and from afar, could pass himself off as an old man rather than a youth."

    p1 "{=blu_text}“Hey! Yellow dude!”{/=blu_text} Blue exclaimed as the yellow figure turned and disappeared from {=red_text}the top of the orange structure."

    p1 "The mysterious man abruptly reappeared at their rear, drowsily staring at the two without making direct eye-contact with either of them."

    y "{=ylw_text}What do you need, guys?"

    r "{=red_text}I sense a lead from this man."

    y "{=ylw_text}Are y’all space police or somethin—"

    b "{=blu_text}Shut up."

    b "{=blu_text}We’re looking for a green guy with a tank on his waist.
Seen him around?"

    y "{=ylw_text}A.. green man..?"

    b "{=blu_text}Yeah, is something wrong?"

    p1 "An unreasonably long silence pervaded the sakura-swept scene, only breaking the moment Yellow moved his gauche gaze towards the two to speak."

    y "{=ylw_text}Uhh.. New York.. He’s in New York.."

    y "{=ylw_text}That’s just about the extent of all I can recall."
```

```
    r "{=red_text}Thank you sir, and may a good morrow be upon you."

    y "{=ylw_text}Yeah, yeah… Just go, and.. Good luck with your business."

    r "{=red_text}Thanks, but we won’t need it" y "{=ylw_text}Hmm... Interesting fellows. They could’ve just looked at that gadget..."

    p1 "Blue and Red, with new insight in tow, traveled to the ‘Big Apple’, better known yet as the terrible, awful town of New York City."

    scene black
    with dissolve
    jump episode_3  # Moves to the next episode

Additional episodes can be coded similarly
label episode_3:
    scene black
    with dissolve

    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 3 - Borehole" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    # Begin scene
    scene background3 with fade

    r "{=red_text}As Blue and I arriv-"

    b "{=blu_text}Who are you talking to, little boy?"

    r "{=red_text}No one, keep being special (ed)."

    p1 "As Blue and Red arrive in New York City, the first place they go is the lovely racist borough, Staten Island."
```

```
    bu1 "What do we have here.."

    bu1 "We got Ed Sheeran ‘n Chris Wink over ‘ere—" p1 "In a hazy flash of blue, lasting only a millisecond, the man completely forgot where he was and what he was doing. Confused, he sauntered off, sadly scratching his head in his bewildered state."

    p1 "Red furrowed his eyebrows, wherein he wasn’t perceiving the full scope of Blue’s abilities, quickly playing it off in his head as some memory manipulation Blue used."

    r "Alright, where are we gonna find this green fella?"

    b "We could check his hometown?"

    r "Where is his hometown, Blue..?"

    b "Queens, you didn’t know?"

    r "How would you even know that..?"

    b "It says it on the gadget, duh.."

    r "Just shut up and take us there."

    b "Will do buckaroo!"

    p1 "As Red and Blue set off on the new journey to go to {=red_text}the green man’s{/=red_text} base of operations, they run into a pole, shattering Red’s spectacles."

    r "OW, WHAT THE FLIP DUUDE!"

    b "My fault.."

    r "You’re buying me new shades bro.."

    r "Anywho, where should we start looking for this guy?"
```

```
    b "Probably under the suspiciously keycarded wall underneath the building the coordinates are set to, goofy." p1 "As they fall down the hole underneath the stairwell of the basement floor, Red and Blue almost instantly become embedded within the fabric of the deeper, darker realms of the Earth itself, falling for what felt to be an endless extract of time."

    p1 "Reaching the bottom, a solid splash could be heard for miles around, wherein they’re both drenched in water. Surrounding them was a monstrously massive, yet suspiciously dim room lined with metal and strange-looking stone."

    b "Hola, ¿cómo estás?"

    p1 "Blue and Red step out of the warm water, taking a few steps forward before pinching their noses due to the wretched stench."

    p1 "A rotting human corpse, holes permeating in and out of it whilst oozing with blood, can be seen in their peripherals, though somehow moving by whatever force of nature allowed it to."

    p1 "Doing their best to ignore it, they tread a few feet further before hitting a crusty, concrete wall headfirst."

    b "Ren-"

    r "Hold it, there’s a lever right there, numbnuts."

    p1 "Placidly pulling it down, the wall retracted automatically, revealing a longer hall, though barren of anything noteworthy."

    p1 "Blue wantonly whipped out a bottle of tepid tequila on the way to the end of the harrowing hall, to which they came face to face with a warp in space-time—{=red_text}a rift of sorts." p1 "As Blue reaches down, slowly ripping through space-time, he gets a burning sensation from the other side."

```

```
    p1 "His hand was alight like a fierce flame, a cold burn, searing straight through the fabric of reality itself."

    p1 "{=red_text}A roaring fire on the other side?
Impossible.{/=red_text} As Blue tried to remove his extremity from the rift, he was met with the intense influx of an almost hungry gravitational-pull on his forearm."

    p1 "Blue gets dragged into the rift leaving behind the gadget he stole off of the green man."

    r "Blue?!"

    r "Blueeee?!!"

    b "IT'S FREEZING IN THERE!"

    r "What was in there?"

    b "It was a lab, made out of the same material that door was made of.."

    r "Then that's where he'll be."

    b "I am NOT going back in there."

    r "So be it, but I need to meet that man that trapped you in that black hole.."

    p1 "Red turned around and grabbed one of the heat regulating suits that was conveniently hung on the wall next to the undead corpse."

    p1 "Red sagaciously stepped into the rift, patiently awaiting Blue's arrival on the other end."

    p1 "Blue, deeply hesitant to sojourn back into the rift after the excruciating entrance he'd just made, contemplated his options at the moment."
```

```
    p1 "On one hand, he’d be curing his curiosity by going in. On the other hand, he hated the cold."

    p1 "Though, really, what was there to lose in exploring this?"

    p1 "Taking this into consideration, blue gathered what little courage he had left, fit himself into one of the suits and jumped into the rift.."

    scene black
    with dissolve
    jump episode_4  # Moves to the next episode

Additional episodes can be coded similarly
label episode_4:
    scene black
    with dissolve

    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 4 - The Terminal" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    # Begin scene
    scene background3 with fade

    p1 "When stepping inside of the rift, he watched on in awe as Red cast the emptiness of this seemingly new dimension away with the flick of his wrist."

    p1 "What was once dark matter, placing immense pressure on and plaguing the air with its very presence, was now entirely engulfed in flames."

    b "Woah.."

    r "Stop gawking. Look alive"

    g "So, I assume my device has effectively lured you and.. whoever that is next to you.. here (as intended)?"
```

```
    b "If you wanna put it like that, yeah."

    g "I'd just rather you hadn't set my beautiful lab ablaze."

    g "It's all going to be a real pain in the ass to fix, you know?"

    r "Wouldn't have done it if you didn't screw with my main man right here."

    g "I did it for research!"

    r "What kind of research do you need to study black holes for??"

    g "Your limited understanding of things renders you incapable of comprehending this shit."

    r "Then, hop off that nerd shit so I don't turn your dick into an if-statement—"

    p1 "As the three bantered boundlessly, the facility surrounding them crumbled, revealing an endless dimension of Void."

    g "And this is why you don't break my stuff, guys."

    p1 "The Void drew near, though it was inconsequential to the lot of them." p1 "The green man types into the terminal: {=grn_text}$ execute Eclipse_Protocol --mask=(facility1) --cloak-level=(max)

--untraceable=(enabled)" p1 "From the computer next to the man poured out a leering, green light, which kept the encroaching entropy at bay."

    p1 "{=red_text}As auspiciously as it turned out, I could tell: These were my missing pieces to that puzzle. The fragments.{/=red_text}" p1 "{=red_text}He definitely thought he looked badass.."

```

g "Anyways, I’m sure you’d be willing to surrender yourselves to me by now; or.. are we doing this the hard way?"

p1 "Red flashed a glaring grin right back at him, except one filled with more glee than condescending connotations."

r "What do you think?"

p1 "The two cosmic catastrophes ambled in circles around each other, staring each other down with indiscernible shimmers in their eyes."

p1 "This stand-off looked to be one for the ages, with neither wanting to back down from this inevitable fight."

p1 "Blue couldn’t seem to read the room, nor understand the situation they were all in, but thought it best to sit back and watch."

p1 "Red’s right hand was half-cocked and settled off to the side, high in anticipation."

p1 "His left hand was noticeably readjusting his jeans, remaining stationary on the hem of them."

p1 "The sanguine simmered in his increasingly vacant irises, indicating to Green his rather extraneous elation."

p1 "Green leaned forward a bit, assuming a grappling stance; albeit, at the same time, his computer remained completely within reach for him to retreat to."

p1 "His eyebrows were furrowed, mostly in confusion as to why Red was so enthralled to be fighting him right now."

g "Are you.. alright..?"

p1 "Red shook himself out of his trance, having lost himself in the moment."

r "Oh.. uh—Yeah, I’m good.."

```
    g "You sure?"

    r "Super sure."

    scene black
    with dissolve
    jump episode_5  # Moves to the next episode

Additional episodes can be coded similarly
label episode_5:
    scene black
    with dissolve

    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 5 - Emblazon" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    # Begin scene
    scene background3 with fade

    p1 "In truth, Red had a folly fixation on fighting. On the other hand, he hadn’t fought another being than his own shadow for countless millennia."

    r "Make sure you ready that wield of yours" p1 "Green simply gawked at Red, Red’s ability to spot the Kawasaki Kane being beyond Green’s understanding."

    p1 "The worst part was that it’d been preemptively coded to be invisible that entire time as well."

    g "Euh.. of course"

    p1 "Red’s grin grew into a mischievous upwards crescent."

    p1 "Green’s serious countenance morphed into a fearful visage, brought instinctively upon him."
```

```
    r "Pick it up."

    p1 "Green held his dominant hand out in front of him, the brandish phasing perfectly into the palm of his hand."

    p1 "He effortlessly flourished the 30-feet-tall bamboo shoot before holding it as if it were a baseball bat."

    r "There’s no way you’re fighting with that.."

    p1 "Green sighed, rescripting the size of his sword in less than a second."

    g "Wanted to fight something your own size, huh?"

    p1 "Red planted his left foot in the ground, assuming a mock-martial stance. He, being the ever-enthusiastic fighter, wanted to make this experience last."

    p1 "Silence split the space between them, tensions rising as time toiled. The fluorescence of Green’s computer screen filled the ramshackle lab with an eerie essence."

    p1 "It was dark."

    p1 "Darker."

    p1 "{=ppl_text}Yet Darker."

    p1 "In the midst of Red’s indecisiveness, Green tactfully blinded him by switching his Terminal UI to what Red read as “light mode.” {=red_text}A dangerous force, surely."

    p1 "Green, in a split-second decision, spewed out a gravity command to the Terminal, switching it to the Sun’s surface."

    p1 "Red failed to falter, only shooting a close-eyed smirk at Green. Green stared in astonishment, blankly blinking at the menacing figure before him."
```

```
    g "You must be some freak of nature."

    p1 "Before he could fall to his knees, Red made a mad dash at Green, grabbing him by the face and slamming him into the metallic floor."

    r "Gravity doesn’t hold you down, I do."

    p1 "A hidden clone swung at Red from behind, striking him clean in the temple. This did no noticeable damage, however."

    r "You’ve got some crazy tricks up your sleeve, though. Props for that."

    p1 "A single jab from Red turned the clone to dust, and Green’s hopes of winning to shambles."

    p1 "Green shook Red’s hand off of him in a desperate attempt to make way for the Terminal, pressing a singular key to reactivate the Eclipse Protocol."

    g "Clothe him."

    p1 "Shadows crept beneath the expanding cracks of the walls, tangling around the bewildered Red’s legs."

    p1 "As realization swept the room with an ominous aura, Green’s eyes and the cracks creeping up the walls began to widen."

    g "Wait—"

    p1 "{=ppl_text}Hey."

    scene black
    with dissolve
    jump episode_6  # Moves to the next episode

Additional episodes can be coded similarly
label episode_6:
    scene black
    with dissolve
```

```
    # Episode title
    show text "Episode 6 - Amethryial" with dissolve $ renpy.pause(2)
    hide text with dissolve

    p1 "As a stubby purple figure steps from the green hued flames of the former shell he was trapped within, the boy emerges without a scratch."

    p1 "An exoskeleton of his former body being burnt to a crisp as he butterflies into a new silhouette."

    p1 "The boy emitted a purple hue only a few could pursue. As he walks over without the immense gravity of the Sun altering him, he stares at the green-colored man."

    p2 "Father."

    g "Ingrate."

    p1 "Purple’s arms extended far beyond his proportional length, reaching out to grab wildly at his maker. Green found no difficulty in evading this whatsoever."

    g "Have my tellings of your dangerous nature not convinced you to keep to yourself?"

    p1 "Purple’s arms retracted, almost in shame."

    p1 "Seeing as they were caught up in their familial affairs, Red saw it fit to rush at Green once more, being as battle-hungry as he was."

    p1 "Green turned towards the sound of struggling to see Red gone, now feeling Red’s bated breath on the nape of his neck."

    g "You little shi—"

    r "Try blocking this."
```

p1 "Green, once again, fell to his knees. Only difference now, his son was there to watch. And he would not let this stand."

p2 "Kneel."

p1 "Red suddenly felt the weight of the world befall him, forcing him to summon the strength to tuck his knees and stubbornly resist the temptations of buckling under Purple’s power."

r "What sorcery is this..?"

p1 "Purple then flicked at him, sending him flying into another wall. The wall crumbles to bits, revealing several other grotesque, humanoid specimens encapsulated in elaborate test tubes."

p1 "Each is different in size, shape and soul, but each is unresponsive—seemingly inanimate. " p1 "All of the test tubes are hooked up to the Terminal, presumably powering it with data and analytics from the test subjects."

r "Green, you bastard…"

g "What? It’s not like any of this concerns you."

r "Then why would you need us for this science-fair project of yours?"

g "Curiosity, really."

r "All of this.. for.. inspired innovation?"

```
Continue with episode 2 content
```

Games: 5 - 15